

PULSE PARK

Pulse Park are a German-Canadian indie rock trio that formed in the spring of 2020. The band is known for their mix of powerful and tight college rock, paired with airy shoegaze elements over which Marc's melancholic voice floats. After the debut album "Phonac Music", the first single from the upcoming album "First Second" was released on February 9, 2024. The single gives a foretaste of the second album, which will be out on vinyl and on all streaming services on April 19, and highlights the elements of the debut even more strongly. The album was once again produced by German producer Kurt Ebelhäuser (Blackmail, Scumbucket).

ABOUT

The three band members first met some time ago on an Arctic expedition in Qikiqtaaluk, Nunavut/Canada, and started learning their instruments during the long polar nights. These were ukuleles that they traded dry fruits for with the Inuit. After the successful introduction of a breeding program for bowhead whales, the band decided to go back to Germany. But unfortunately, before this could happen, huskies escaped with their belongings, so the guys had to get by by playing street music in Canada's pedestrian zones, singing about the Great White North. Songs all about the cold, the dark, cod-liver oil and not forgetting the white Arctic hares.

Pulse Park are: Magnusson - guitar, voice, Frank Hagen - bass, guitar, Oliver Polastri - drums
